POWR Initiative Moves Towards A Vote

By Elizabeth Cowley

Protect Our Water Resources (POW R) turned in 7,410 signatures in support of its initiative that directs the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) to stop allocating water for new use until Cal-Am finds a secure replacement for its 10,730 acre feet of illegal diversions from the Carmel River. The signatures were presented to the Monterey County Elections Department on August 26, one day before the deadline. Just over 5,600 signatures need to be validated to move the initiative forward. POWR co-chair Bud Nunn said POWR has a 2,000 signature 'cushion' and added that he is "un-cautiously optimistic" that the initiative will qualify.

POWR expects that the Monterey County Elections Department will complete its initial review of the signatures in one week. If the initiative qualifies the MPWMD Board of Directors has the option of adopting the initiative, if it does not it will go to the voters.

In June POWR asked the MPWMD board to voluntarily adopt its initiative to avoid the $70,000 cost of a special election. The MPWMD declined to consider adopting the initiative for reasons including that at that time POWR only had about half the necessary signatures. If enough signatures are validated the MPWMD will have to hold a public hearing and consider adopting the initiative. Nunn said "The quickest and least expensive thing for them (MPWMD)

Suzanne Sawyer, Manager of Education Programs for Rancho San Carlos and Project Supervisor, Joe Culp, share a moment with Carlos Ocegueda.

Carlos Ocegueda Receives Award for Work at Rancho San Carlos

The first annual Central Coast Summer Youth Awards Ceremony was held at the Inn at Spanish Bay. The ceremony recognized 19 youths and adults who excelled in a federally-funded program which provides almost 1,400 jobs for economically disadvantaged youths.

Carlos Ocegueda, a 16 year old Salinas youth, received the "Outstanding Crew Participant" award for his work at Rancho San Carlos from Representative Sam Farr and Seaside Mayor Don Jordan. "He set the standards that others strove to match," said Mayor Jordan.

Ocegueda, along with 3 other young men, worked at the Santa Lucia Preserve at Rancho San Carlos spending the summer constructing an addition to a greenhouse, planting tree seedlings, picking native grass seeds and building trails that will be used by the public who participate in the programs offered by the Rancho San Carlos Educational Foundation.

It was a proud and memorable occasion for Ocegueda who made the decision not to work in the fields this summer with his parents, both field workers, where he could have made more money. Ocegueda said "I was able to gain new and different experiences that have enriched my life and given me some new opportunities to think about."

Joe Culp, the Youth Summer Program supervisor for Rancho San Carlos, was on hand to share in Ocegueda's memorable occasion. "This is the second year I have had the opportunity to work with the program at the Ranch and it has been an enriching experience. To see the personal growth and progress each boy makes by the end of the summer is very rewarding."

Legless Lizard Proposed as Endangered

By Elizabeth Cowley

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has proposed to list the black legless lizard and five plants found on the Monterey Peninsula as endangered or threatened which could impact development proposals throughout the area including the Fort Ord Reuse Plan and the Pebble Beach Company lot and golf course development. A public hearing, requested by Pebble Beach Company attorney Robert D. Thornton, on the proposed listings was held on August 19 at the Hyatt Regency Monterey.

The black legless lizard and four plants, the coastal dunes milk-vetch, Yadon's piperia, Hickman's potentilla, and Monterey clover have been proposed for endangered designation and the Gowen cypress is proposed for listing as threatened under the Federal Endangered Species Act. These species occur primarily along the coast of northern Monterey County from Point Lobos State Park north to Elkhorn Slough.

Katie Ahern, FORA special Projects Manager, said "If the lizard is listed it will delay economic recovery from the base closure at least two years." If the black legless lizard is declared endangered, to comply with the Endangered Species Act neighboring cities will be required to develop additional habitat restoration and conservation programs in conjunction with the Fish and Wildlife Service, a costly and time consuming process. Ahern said the Service is basing its decision on 1985 data so FORA has

Davi in Runoff for 5th District Supervisor

Although his only opponent in the November '96 run-off election for the 5th District Supervisor's seat has been badly damaged by the disclosure of his money woes, candidate Jeff Davi says he will give 110% to the upcoming campaign.

In a recent interview Davi told The Sun that he has his first rounds of literature, direct mail, advertising and speaking commitments already underway.

This election season Jeff's brother, Anthony Davi, will get full time help with campaign management from Ken Curcia.

Ken comes to the Davi campaign with four years of campaign and legislative experience. He holds a BA in Political Science from U. C. Davis.

Davi's official "kick-off" for the run-off campaign will be September 15th.

During the earlier election period, candidate David Potter placed great emphasis on his business acumen and success. In fact, Potter has been facing foreclosure(s) and other fiscal delinquencies.

New Smog Check Program

The Board of Directors of the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District received a report at its meeting on August 21, 1996 on the new Smog Check Program. The program was developed by the California Bureau of Automotive Repair to meet requirements of the Federal Clean Air Act.

The program includes provisions for identifying and repairing gross polluters and higher cost limits for repairing vehicles prior to obtaining a waiver. The District Board also heard a report about a state scrappage program being developed to buy gross polluting vehicles. Implementation dates for the program have not been set.

Consumers who have questions or concerns about the Smog Check Program may contact the Department of Consumer Affairs Consumer Hotline at 800-952-5210.

CDF Suspends Burning Permits

CDF State Director, Richard Wilson, has made the following declaration: "Due to the extreme menace of destruction by fire to life, improved property, or natural resources caused by the acute dryness and heat and the heavy accumulation of dead and down forest fuels, and fire suppression forces being heavily committed statewide to control fires; and under authority vested in me as the Director of the Department of Forestry and Fire Protection (CDF), as per Section 4423.1 of the Public Resources Code, hereby suspend, except within incorporated cities, the privileges of burning under permit or other use of open fire in the geographic areas described as: All state responsibility area lands within the State of California.

In accordance with Section 4423.2 of the Public Resources Code, state rangers or other authorized agents of the Director of CDF may issue restricted temporary burning permits whenever it can be shown that burning of open fire is essential for reasons of public health, safety, welfare.

The order became effective on August 13, 1996 and will remain in effect until terminated by me."

FIESTA!

by Vince Guarino

The 32nd Carmel Mission Basilica Fiesta in recent times will be held between noon and 5 p.m. on Sunday, September 29, 1996 in the Mission courtyard at Rio Road and Lausen Drive, Carmel.

A tradition begun in 1771, the Fiesta celebrates the feast of St. Carlos Borromeo, Mission patron saint. A procession from the Basilica, following the 11 a.m. mass, to the brightly decorated mission courtyard officially opens the festivities.

Continuous entertainment by Mariachi Mixtlan de la Bahia de Monterey and by 30 young dancers make the ancient adobe walls echo with Spanish rhythms. Massive permanent barbeque pits produce hundreds of savory chickens, nurtured by an enthusiastic crew endowed with years of tradition and ritual. Some 65 artisans exhibit their crafts for sale, much of it unseen elsewhere during the year. Bingo and children's games such as cake walk and fish pond are featured, as are tacos, burritos, cotton candy, hot dogs, popcorn, wine, beer, coffee and homemade cakes.

Water District's Public Information Program Revised

By Elizabeth Cowley

At its August 19 meeting Henrietta Stern of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) presented the findings of the citizens ad hoc task force which was formed to evaluate the district's public information program. In June the MPWMD allocated $131,700 for the public information program but deferred approval pending the findings of the task force. The task force was comprised of 18 volunteers whose goal was to help the district achieve its Strategic Plan objective of "Increasing Public Trust and Confidence."

While the ad hoc task force was not formed to suggest water source alternatives, Director Haddad commented at that he felt the committee was lopsided in favor of a dam. David Dillworth who opposed the dam and comments at nearly every MPWMD meeting said, "I didn't know this committee was open to people like me - I would like to volunteer."

The task force concluded that the public information program is appropriate and suggested the program's emphasis should be to provide information but more importantly to provide a means for the public to meet with board members and suggested small informal meetings. The task force also recommended that the district board conduct itself in a more professional manner.

The districts public information plan included 18 elements four of which the task force recommended be eliminated for a budget savings of $28,600. The task force also recommended that the contingency fund be reduced from $10,500 to $2,500. High priority was given to items including the creation of a web page, media releases, targeted distribution of updates on district actions and creating a permanent ad hoc advisory group.

The task force agreed that the Ingram Group should be retained to handle the public relations program due to its expertise in community issues, water issues in particular.

Local Clean Air Grants

On August 21, the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District Board of Directors approved $1.6 million in clean air grants to public agencies in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties. The 26 grants will remove some 1424 tons of pollutants from our air over the life of the projects.

"The grants are funded by motor vehicle registrations in our region, so it's appropriate that we give the money back to the community to help protect our air," said Ruth Kesler, Chair of the District Board of Directors. "These projects represent a tremendous partnership between public agencies throughout our region", she added.

Among the 12 projects in Monterey County, the District Board approved a $200,000 grant to help keep the WAVE (Waterfront Area Visitor's Express) running for another season.

Terrier Racing

Are you ready for something genuinely silly and a lot of fun? If so, be at the Monterey Fairgrounds at 7 p.m. on Sunday, September 1, 1996 at the horse show arena.

Starting off the Sunday evening performance of the Peruvian Paso Horse Show, will be a series of Jack Russell Terrier races featuring the energetic, appealing little dogs which you may know from the tv shows, "Wishbone" or "Frasier".

Nobody knows who enjoys terrier racing more - the owners, the audience or the dogs. Four dogs at a time are released from a tiny starting gate and dash down a straight track, chasing a fuzzy lure pulled just ahead of them, providing a happy way to use their inborn instinct for hunting.

Come and have a few laughs. Call 659-5625 if you have a Jack Russell you'd like to enter, or if you'd be willing to help out during the races.

New Film Guide

The second edition of the Monterey County Film Resources Guides is underway to promote the diverse locations, talented crew and local services available to assist in on-location film production in Monterey County.

Produced by the Monterey County Film Commission in cooperation with Bay Publishing, the four color booklet will include general information on Monterey County, permit procedures for the various municipalities, climate charts, area maps and listings of local crew, equipment, facilities and support services. Individuals and businesses will also have a chance to place display advertisements in order to gain further exposure.

Any individual or business interested in a listing in the production guide should call the Monterey County Film Commission at 646-0910. The deadline for listings if September 25, 1996.

to do would be to just adopt it." If they don't adopt the initiative POWR will push to see that it gets on the ballot as soon as possible, Nunn said. POWR has missed the deadline for the November election so a special election will be necessary if the MPWMD doesn't adopt the initiative voluntarily.

In relation to the 150 acre feet the MPWMD allocated for new use thins month David Dilworth, POWR steering committee member, said in a press release, "The water district admits we have a water shortage, and they admit the water they just gave away doesn't exist. Yet just last week they gave away another 10 days of our drought reserve for development anyway."

In addition to halting new allocations, the POWR initiative would prohibit the transfer of New Los Padres Dam permits and the expansion of MPWMD boundaries. The initiative states that the MPWMD should gain voter approval prior to spending over $1 million on a project and directs the MPWMD to secure a reasonable drought reserve.

Janice O'Brien, POWR co-chair, said during her presentation to the MPWMD in June that the focus of the initiative is to get the MPWMD to concentrate on the short term goals of not increasing water demand, finding a legal replacement to Cal-Am's illegal Carmel River diversions and ensuring a secure water supply for current residents.

YOUR WORLD AND MINE
Araby Colton

He was a smart fella, that Dwight Eisenhower. He knew what he was about as a soldier, and he also knew something about being a citizen.

In his last words as President he warned us that, "The problem in defense is how far you can go without destroying from within what you are trying to defend from without."

So, now that the "evil empire" is no longer without, perhaps we should take a look at what we're doing to our "within".

The figures (from Worldwatch Institute's World Report of 1991) are not too happy.

For instance, consider the large tracts of land our military is supposed to protect. The Southern California desert will take thousands of years to recover, if it ever can, from General George Patton's tank maneuvers of the early forties.

In November, 1989, the Pentagon had to close off some 275 square kilometers of public land in Nevada after discovering 1389 live bombs, 123, 375 pounds of shrapnel, and 28,136 rounds of ammunition, accidentally dropped outside of an Air Force bombing range.

Said Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary Robert Stone, "Land used for bombing practice has to be closed to human use permanently because even an intensive effort will fail to locate all unexploded bombs."

And what about the drain on energy and materials? Well, the Pentagon is our single largest consumer, domestically, and probably worldwide. It uses, in twelve months, enough energy to run the entire U.S. urban mass transit system for almost fourteen years.

An Air Force jet, on a regular training mission, uses in less than an hour 2400 liters of fuel, almost twice as much gas as you or I use in a whole year.

And a modern battle tank's fuel consumption is better measured in gallons per mile than in miles per gallon.

And what about air pollution? Are you considering leaving the car in the garage, and bicycling to work? You know, to do your part for clean air? (Of course, biking on the freeway is a bit un-nerving). Well, consider that the armed forces of the world account for at least six to ten percent of global air pollution. The Research Institute for Peace Policy in Starnberg, Germany, estimated that ten to thirty percent of all global environmental degradation is due to military related activities.

And then there's global warming and ozone depletion. In 1988 the Pentagon's activities resulted in carbon emissions of about 46 million tons, roughly 3.5 percent of the U.S. total. As the U.S. share of global military spending is about one-third of the world's, the annual carbon emissions of the military worldwide, was 150 million tons, about equal to the total carbon emissions of the United Kingdom.

Worldwatch Institute sums it up: "In their incessant pursuit of prowess and preparedness, the armed forces are poisoning the land and people they are supposed to protect. Military toxics are contaminating water used for drinking or irrigation, killing fish, befouling the air, and rendering vast tracts of land unusable for generations to come. Military bases have become health timebombs detonating in slow motion."

Surely it's time for the environmentalists to demand world disarmament ... because maybe we can't afford the "price of glory".

OUR BEST CHANCE AT COMMON SENSE
Andrew F. Bender

Given the fact that once again we voters have more than two choices in selecting our President, it's a wonder how we persist in moaning and howling about the two major political parties.

Why not save ourselves the time, energy and frustration of this continual grumbling and try one of the several viable "third party" candidates?

AS THE RIVER RUNS
Norman Spaulding

A CALL FOR HONOR AND HONESTY

The contest to fill the seat of the retiring Sam Karas for our 5th District Monterey County Supervisor's seat was a heated affair, leaving us with a November run-off.

In every debate and comparison, Jeff Davi always seemed better grounded, better prepared, and the candidate with a clearer and more balanced understanding of the issues that concern the Sun's readers.

David Potter, somehow came across as a polished big city politico, desperate to have a job and a regular paycheck. There was always something that felt disingenuous about the great emphasis he placed on his history of fiscal responsibility and success.

Faced with pending foreclosure(s) and unhappy creditors, the truth about David Potter came to light. It is not so much that he is having financial problems that was troubling, rather the fact that he was apparently dishonest in representing his motives for running for public office and his real ability to contribute to the county.

Were he an honorable man he would withdraw from the campaign, saving himself, his family, his political party, the embarrassment of staying on the ticket. By withdrawing, David Potter, could save the county the cost of printing and tabulating ballots and election materials, and preserve a morsel of his tattered dignity.

The only criticisms leveled at Jeff Davi are that he is young, vibrant and intelligent. There is also the argument that he comes from a family of successful real estate and family people who have served the interests of the Greater Peninsula community for over 3 generations.

There will be no write-ins in this run-off election. Jeff Davi stands alone as the only qualified candidate to serve us as our 5th District Supervisor.

The Sun gave Davi an unqualified endorsement in the March election.

We certainly wish David Potter the best in getting his financial and personal life straightened out. It is not a burden this county should bear. Potter should withdraw. The Sun will be delighted to publish his notice of withdrawal or a statement from him explaining why he is declining this strong suggestion that he withdraw and endorse Jeff Davi.

Election after election, we have engaged in this endless futile exercise of pointing out the serious faults of both the Democratic and Republican parties and their candidates: repeated broken promises; wasteful use of public funds; taking huge gifts from large corporations; promising more than can be delivered; constantly postponing balancing the budget; raising taxes; waffling on issues; falling far short on ethics; etc.

Listening to staunch defenders of the Democratic Party on talk shows (both hosts and their callers), one hears many of the same accusations hurled at Republicans as the ones hurled by Republican talk show hosts at Democrats.

So one would think if any kind of common sense prevailed, that most voters would turn to the "third parties", which offer more and more options and seem to be free of politics-as-usual. No doubt the biggest deterrent to going that route is the fear that we "throw our votes away" because, as the popular notion goes, no third party candidate ever gets elected. But by voting reluctantly for one of the major parties, we make that very prophecy happen.

The results of the 1992 presidential election should give disenchanted voters reason for hope: in spite of three major correctable blunders and other flaws, Ross Perot, without a party, managed to garner 19% of the national vote!

The very fact that whenever he decides to run against them, both major parties get nervous and unite in mercilessly attacking him, this shows that Perot, far from being "a joke" or "crazy", poses a serious threat to the long-time two party monopoly (often called "Demopublican or Republicrat" by independents). Indeed spokespeople for that monopoly have made fun of Perot's ears, his speech, his short stature, his voice, his folksy humor, and yes, his fortune. My response to all of this bashing is that any man who has made $2.7 billion can be neither "a joke" nor "crazy". Especially someone with all those physical "shortcomings".

Perot's three major correctable flaws in 1992 were: a) the dismal performance of his running mate; b) the fact he dropped out and then re-entered the campaign; c) various problems in his budding organization.

Now that his Reform Party is organized, Perot this time can concentrate on campaigning. His is the only "third party" to have held a convention. Another serious contender, the Libertarian Party, besides suffering from too narrow a platform, has three different presidential candidates running.

If Perot should choose a viable, experienced, like-minded candidate as running mate, he stands to do even better this year than in '92. And what better choice than Richard Lamm - the man who just competed with him for the top post in the new party. Lamm is a rare combination of someone with political experience (former governor) and like Perot, with good ideas and a mind of his own.

Referring to our non-stop federal borrowing as "economic cocaine", Lamm points out that even "under the most conservative Republican agenda, we wtill add $1.8 trillion over the next seven years to our children's debt". He insists we must take on all the sacred cows in the federal budget.

Next to reducing the federal deficit, Lamm's highest priority is election reform: "Our campaigns are legalized briberies ...{The} Republican and Democratic parties are never going to reform the election system". Third on his list is the time honored belief that "charity begins at home"; and so, before meeting the needs of the rest of the world, we must meet our own.

Lamm also thinks we have too much health care but not enough health, and too many lawyers but not enough justice. Best of all, Lamm strongly shares my view, and perhaps yours as well, that our government is long overdue to embrace the values of the responsible, moderate mainstream Americans rather than those of the zealots at both extremes.

Artists Remembered

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Apparently our local newspapers were not notified about the deaths of two persons who were active in Carmel's early art colony: the etcher, Gene Kloss, and her poet husband, Phillips Kloss. Gene passed away at their Taos, N. M., home last June 24th, just one month short of her 95th birthday. She is buried there near Phillips who preceded her in death.

Originally residents of San Francisco's East Bay area, the couple spent courting days on the Monterey Peninsula, Gene painting, Phillips lauding the beauty of the region. After a 1925 marriage the Klosses frequently rented a cottage in Carmel-by-the-Sea and were active in the Arts and Crafts group (together with such people as DeNeale Maguire, Ferdinand Burgdorff, Louise Fisher MacDougla, Jennie Short Cannon, Rowena Meeks Abdy, the Misses Culbertson and Johnson). In 1927 the Klosses helped form the Carmel Art Association. In fact, Gene Kloss is the first and only known woman member ever made a National Academician. That honor was bestowed upon her in 1970, long after the Klosses had moved to Taos and Gene became internationally famous.

To read more about the etcher's whirlwind career, look up the "Carmel Art Association: A History", which is shelved in local libraries or can be purchased at the Carmel Art Association.

Questions Queen Choice

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Last Wednesday, August 14th, my friend and I attended the Carmel Valley Rancher's Days Queen contest to watch a mutual friend of our daughters compete in the contest. While all of the five girls competing did a wonderful job, one of the contestants shown brightly as the winner (this contestant was not my friend's daughter).

In fact several people standing around me commented that it was obvious who the queen would be, but the real decision would be with the first runner-up. Then to my and everyone's amazement the girl whom everyone felt should have won was called as first runner-up.

There was dead silence at this announcement and several people, including my friend whose daughter was competing said that someone must have added the score sheets wrong. I normally would not write to a paper about something like this, in fact there were so many people surprised and disappointed with the decision that I thought someone else would surely complain. After spending time at Ranchers' Days on Saturday and still hearing the murmurings from people at the obvious mis-judging of the contest, I felt a need to write.

We are a small community and take pride in our area and this wonderful event, but when there is an obvious mis-justice like that which occurred last Wednesday I think someone needs to look into this. I hope if not the good folks that put on Ranchers' Days, but someone else with a little power that attended the contest will investigate.

The rumor running around is that the contest was fixed by one of the judges and none of the other girls stood a chance. I hope this is wrong, but I certainly think we owe it to our youth to run a fair contest and to investigate the possibility of wrong doing.

Republican Convention

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Anyone who saw network coverage of the Republican convention in San Diego undoubtedly understands why we felt it wise to telecast our own convention.

Our convention programs on the Family Channel received outstanding reviews and were watched by more than two million viewers. Another half-million watched our sunrise show on the USA Network. Everyone associated with the convention is proud of our coverage, and I predict the upcoming Democrat convention will be the last party national convention that does not televise itself.

A more timely issue is how will the news media cover the Democrat convention? I can think of no more open test of the question of media bias.

For two weeks reporters chased down every Republican who can spell abortion to try to stir up a fight at our convention. Having failed to portray the convention as mortal combat between the mean spirited and the merely extreme, some journalists got made and went home. "No news" they complained. "No news" actually translates as "no bad news".

In Chicago, will reporters focus on the rifts in the Democrat Party?

Will Jesse Jackson, Teddy Kennedy and other supporters of the welfare industry be pursued so they can attack Clinton's signing the welfare reform bill? After all, Senator Christopher Dodd, the national Democrat Party chairman, publicly criticized Clinton's decision. Will the media focus on the schism over the long time Democrat principle that people are entitled to welfare?

Over a third of House Democrats voted for the bill to ban partial birth abortions, including their House Leader and Deputy Leader. Clinton vetoed it. Will the media report on this abortion issue like they chased Republicans around on abortion in San Diego?

This week, North Carolina Governor Jim Hunt blasted Clinton for his decision to regulate tobacco as a narcotic. Will he and other tobacco state Democrats be asked about their battle with Clinton over this contentious issue?

The Democrat National Committee is soliciting contributions of $100,000 and more from fat cats and corporate America. Are large contributions news, if the Democrats receive them?

All Americans will be interested to see if real controversy and contention among Democrats is considered as newsworthy as the controversy that never actually occurred at our convention. Tune in.

Republican National Committee

COMPUTER TALK
Val Healey

Part 25 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

To illustrate the vast amount of information in a 300 samples per inch 24-bit image, an exercise was set in the last part to calculate the size of the largest square image that one can put onto a 3.5" diskette. First, remember that a 3.5" diskette holds about 1.44 megabytes when unformatted. When formatted the actual space is a little less and we will take it as 1.2 MB to be on the conservative side. Taking a KB as 1024 bytes, and an MB as 1024 KB, the size, at least in my calculation, came out at about 2.16". Thus, this dinky little picture has the same amount of information as 1.2 x 1024/3 = 410 pages of text.

The kinds of images we have been discussing, in which the whole image is built up from little chunks - samples or pixels - each with an independent color, are called bitmapped images and when these are saved one has to choose the "format" which means choosing a procedure. Many different formats are available e.g. tiff, gif, jpeg, bmp, pcx, etc. and the corresponding file extensions are .tif, .gif, .jpg, .bmp and .pcx. Each of these have different computer codes for storing the images. An image saved in one particular format requires an image editor, or possibly a paint program, that will be able to open it. Most editors and paint programs have a limited number of formats available. For example, if you have a jpeg image it will have a name like mypussy.jpg and the editor must be able to handle jpeg files if you want to view it.

Until just a few years ago, when the facilities became available on the Internet to view and transmit images, it was a deadly dull place where only text was in use. At the present time the formats used for images there are gif and jpeg but it changing very rapidly and more may be available soon. One of the driving forces from the Internet is towards finding better and faster means of transmitting images and this is via compression techniques, which are often applied to text files as well. To see how this would work with a text file we have only to observe that in every language some words appear very frequently, for example: and, when, which, for, that, etc. Now if each word that appears many times is replaced by a single ASCII character, then the file takes up much less space and is called compressed. The file is transmitted and, when it arrives, it is uncompressed by restoring the words again. It is quite common to compress files to about 1/3 or 1/4 of its original space which speeds the transmission.

Image compression takes numerous forms but the simplest one divides the image into sections that have reasonably uniform color and texture and approximates these sections by an average color and texture. Thus much less information needs to be transmitted about each section. Image compressions can be divided into two types: lossless, in which the image is fully restored after uncompression and "lossy" in which the picture quality is degraded. Usually a lossy compression will allow relatively low compressions with little difference to the image but high compressions may result in a greatly degraded picture which will have fuzziness, unnatural color gradients, and departures from the original colors.

At the present time, driven by the Internet, compression techniques are being developed very rapidly and image compressions with factors of several hundred are now possible. Many techniques are proprietary to the company that developed them but many are also in the public domain and these compresssion utilities may be used freely.

One of the more interesting recent developments with images is the ability to encode and hide information in pictures. To most casual observers the pictures look quite normal but a decoding program can extract the hidden information. This has significance at a time when governments are trying to deny organized crime, and in the process everyone else, the right to transmit information that has been encoded using complex coding systems that are difficult to break.

asked the Service to delay consideration of listing the black legless lizard until new data can be obtained. "In 1985 the base was still open and it was thought that there were only 400 acres of lizard habitat at Fort Ord but we plan to set aside 15,000 acres as open space - a considerable change of circumstances.", Ahern said. FORA, California State University at Monterey Bay and the Bureau of Land Management are coordinating efforts to get an accurate count of the black legless lizard but it can only be spotted during the coldest periods, usually in January and February, so new data could not be available until the Spring of 1997. While a formal study has just begun, sightings of the lizard have increased to areas not previously thought to be lizard habitat thus the lizard population may be more numerous than previously thought.

All of the proposed species are found in the Del Monte Forest and the five plant species are found in areas of the Pebble Beach Company's proposed lot and golf course development. Ed Brown, Pebble Beach Company Vice President of Planning, said "At the time Yadon's piperia was originally considered for listing it was thought that there were only 2,000 plants in existence but we know from our studies that over 30,000 plants exist - much greater than previously thought." Brown added that much of the Yadon's piperia is found in areas designated as open space. Patricia Foulk, Fish and Wildlife Service Spokesperson said "The Pebble Beach Company has done a very good job over the years at protecting Monterey Bay plants through their botanical preserve, plantings, and fencing in of dune areas." but added that some type of modification to the project will probably be necessary if the plants are listed under the Endangered Species Act.

The Final Environmental Impact Report for the Pebble Beach lot and golf course development is not yet complete but Ed Brown said the report does consider the preservation of all of the proposed species. Brown said, "There is no question that (lot program) impacts can be fully mitigated." Brown said the Monterey clover appears to lie dormant until after a fire, such as the 1987 fire in Pebble Beach. "The entire area that it (Monterey clover) is known to exist will be set aside as open space in the Huckleberry Hill area." Brown said.

Patricia Foulk said if the plants are listed "The Pebble Beach Company will probably have to consult with Fish and Wildlife. Very few projects are actually stopped but it will slow them down due to the time consuming process." Foulk said that when endangered plants occur on private property the developer/owner must consult with the Fish and Wildlife Service to ensure that the use of the property does not impact the plant or animal if any type of federal funding or permitting is involved or if Environmental Protection Agency listed pesticides are to be employed.

The five plants and the black legless lizard are threatened by alteration, destruction, and fragmentation of habitat due to urban and recreational development, by competition from non-native species and disruption of natural fire cycles. Foulk described the Fish and Wildlife Service as "the emergency room" for imperiled species. A designation of threatened indicates that the Service believes the species will become endangered without protection and a designation of Endangered indicates that the species in under imminent threat of extinction without protection.

The legless lizard and five plants were originally proposed for listing last summer but due to a Congressional moratorium on the Service's activities associated with final listings under the Endangered Species Act beginning in April 1995 the proposal was set aside until President Clinton removed the moratorium in May of 1996.

Foulk said the purpose of the hearing process is to gather information about proposed species and she expects a final decision in about one year.

Written comments will be accepted through August 30, 1996. Written comments and materials should be sent to the Field Supervisor, Ventura Field Office, 2493 Portola Road, Suite B, Ventura, California 93003.
